Nightkit raced out of the den, his sister behind him. Finally! He was six moons old! He watched as thief elderly leader scrambled up the rocks to Tallperch. "Two kits have reached their sixth moon. Rootkit, Nightkit, climb up here." Redstar rasped. The kits did as they were told. "Is it your wish to train as warriors of CloudClan?" "It is!" They replied in unison. "Then henceforth you will be called Nightpaw and Rootpaw. Crowsong, you will mentor Nightpaw. Just because he is your sister's son doesn't mean to go easy on him. Bearfang, you will mentor Rootpaw. Guide her wisely on the path of a warrior." He rasped. Nightpaw bounded over to touch noses with his mentor. "Can we explore the territory?" He asked, giving an excited bounce. "Sure. " she purred. "Follow me."

Nightpaw walked behind his mentor, chin high. He would be the best warrior ever! Crowsong stopped, holding her tail high. "Shh! There's two PineClan cats on our territory. It looks like Ironclaw and Wolfslice." She said. Nightpaw nodded and crouched down in the bushes. Crowsong padded out of her hiding spot. "What are you doing on CloudClan territory?" She asked, her voice cold. Ironclaw sneered at her. "Like two scrawny cats could chase us off." He pounced on Crowsong and began tussling with her. Wolfslice joined in, helping his clanmate. Nightpaw was furious. He let out the biggest yowl his little body could handle before leaping onto Wolfslice and digging his claws into the warrior's shoulders. Wolfslice let out a screech and turned around to slash Nightpaw across the face. Nightpaw felt blood trickle into his eye as he slashed blindly, catching Ironclaw on the ear. He felt a flash of satisfaction as the ear ripped beneath his claws. Crowsong leapt up and battled Wolfslice while Nightpaw held off Ironclaw. He heard a yowl behind him. It was Leafwing and Hayheart! The two PineClan cats went running, and Nightpaw spun into blackness.

Nightpaw awoke slowly, blinking away the haze. Speckledsnow was standing over him, her paws green with ointment. She rubbed one of them over his left eye. He realized that he couldn't see out of it! "What happened? Is Crowsong okay?" He demanded. "She is fine. You were slashed across the face by Wolfslice. Your eye will be fine, just a little blurry for a few days or so." She stated. Nightpaw felt a twinge of pride as he remembered the way Ironclaw's ear ripped. That would leave a scar. "You may get back to training, just be careful. The gathering's tomorrow, and I don't want you hurt." She said. "Okay. I'll be careful, I promise." He replied. He walked over to his mentor. "Can we do some battle training? Or hunting?" He asked eagerly. "Of course. We need to practice in case we meet some more PineClan cats." Her claws scraped the ground as she spat out the words. She padded into the bushes and made her way over to the training clearing. Nightpaw followed, keeping his ears alert for any footsteps. Crowsong beckoned him over with her tail. "Watch closely now. Do what I do." She leapt into the air, spun around, and landed squarely on Nightpaw's shoulders. He fell underneath her with a thud. She got off of him and let him get up. "Now do that move on me." Nightpaw did as she did and leapt into the air and twisted to land on her shoulders. She went down, but only to spring up and fall backwards into Nightpaw. Nightpaw dodged her swift movement and leapt onto her belly, kicking with his hindpaws, careful to sheath his claws. He leapt off and stood, watching Crowsong get to her paws. He heard a footsteps behind him, and saw Sunstorm and her apprentice, Heartpaw. "Can they train together?" She asked. "Sure. " Crowsong replied. Heartpaw nodded at her new opponent. She growled and crouched, and Nightpaw began pacing, snarling. Suddenly, Heartpaw leapt at Nightpaw, teeth bared. He dodged, nipping her back leg and pulling her down. She screeched and raked her forepaws down his side. He spun around, nipping her front leg. They broke apart as their mentors came rushing over, their eyes glowing with pride. "You have done well, Nightpaw." Crowsong said softly. "I am proud to call you my apprentice."

It had been three moons since the accident, and Nightpaw was flourishing. His muscles were rippling under his sleek black pelt, and his eye had healed nicely, though a fat pink scar still remained. He jumped, startled, as Redstar's voice rang through the stony hollow. "All cats old enough to climb these rocks gather around for a clan meeting!" He yowled. "We have two apprentices who are ready to become warriors! Honeypaw, Heartpaw, come here." The sisters did as they were told, and scrambled up the rocks to Tallperch. "Is it your wish to become warriors of CloudClan?" "It is!" They mewed, trembling with excitement. "Then your new names are Honeystorm and Heartspark." "Honeystorm! Heartspark!" Cheerful yield filled the clan as the newly made warriors clambered down to mingle with their clanmates. Heartspark looked over at Nightpaw, and he blinked affectionately back at her. She padded over to him, eyes dancing under the moonlight. "Wanna share a piece of fresh-kill before I go and stand vigil?" "Of course." He purred. The two cats padded away, tails entwined.

"Nightfall! Rootheart!" Excited voices rang around the clan, Heartspark's voice drowning out the others. Nightfall looked at the beautiful shecat with affection and warmth flooding his eyes. He padded down to touch noses with his new denmates. Heartspark padded up to him. "I can stay awake with you during the vigil, if you want." She said. "If you think you can, go ahead." The two young cats sat side by side, watching the earth darken as night came upon them. Heartspark curled up into a tight ball, her tail over her nose. Nightfall let her stay there, as he knew she was tired. He sat there till dawn, and his old mentor padded up to him. "You're free to go and sleep now." She said. He nodded sleepily, and nudged Heartspark awake. "Wha? I was asleep. " she said, blinking the drowsiness from her clear blue eyes. "My vigil is over. Wanna go back to the den?" He asked. "Sure. " she manage a rumbling purr as she followed him into the den. They slept until sunhigh, pelts brushing, and went to go hunt together. "Nightfall?" The beautiful silver shecat asked. "Will you be my mate?" "Of course. I love you, Heartspark. I always will."

Yowls filled the air. Nightfall clawed at a red tom's flank before racing to help Rootheart. He was suddenly knocked sideways by a dark tabby tom. He spun around to face his attacker. "I am Darksoul. And I will destroy your filthy clan!" He said, springing at him. Nightfall dodged sideways. He gave him a good slice across the face as the PineClan leader yowled defeat. The victorious cats staggered back to the camp. The prophecy rang in Nightfall's ears, though something had been added to it. "Night will fall and the Dark will rise, Then Night will rise and fall once more, until one is defeated in the war."

Nightfall shook his head and padded to Firespots. The medicine cat treated his bloodied shoulder. He padded over to the nursery, to check on his round-bellied mate. She had been expecting his kits for a moon. She was sleeping peacefully, her fur silver. He sighed relief. She was safe. And he would die to keep it that way.
